ECLIPSES.

There are three this year, viz: two of the Sun, and one of the Moon, and a Transit of Mercury.

First, of the Sun, May 27th, invisible.

Second, of the Moon, June 10th, invisible.

Third, Transit of Mercury, November 7th, visible.

As seen from the centre of the earth:

First contact of limbs,	-	5h	29m	56sec	mean time.
Least distances of centres, 5' 34"	-	8	5	10	"
Last contact of limbs,	-	10	40	31	"

The ingress will be visible from the Western extremity of Africa and the whole continent of America. The egress from the Western half of North America, the Western Coast of South America, New Holland, and the North Eastern part of Asia.

Fourth, total eclipse of the Sun, November 20th, invisible.

Venus (♀) will be morning star until the 18th of October, then evening star until the end of the year.

All over face. Several years since, an old Indian strolling about the streets of Columbus, Ohio, with no other protection than a half worn blanket, which left his arms and legs exposed, was accosted by the Governor of Ohio, who expressed astonishment that any human being could bear exposure in such weather with so insufficient a covering. Why, Billy Wyandot, said the Governor, are not your arms and legs cold? Ho—ho—no—Captain Governor, replied Billy, you face cold? Oh no, said his interrogator, my face has become inured to the severity of the weather. Well, Captain, rejoined the hardy aborigine, Indian all over face.

THE WAY TO BE HAPPY.

Cut your coat according to your cloth, is an old maxim and a wise one: and if people will only square their ideas according to their circumstances, how much happier might we all be! If we only would come down a peg or two in our notions, in accordance with our waning fortunes, happiness would be always within our reach. It is not what we have, or what we have not, which adds or subtracts from our felicity. It is the longing for more than we have, the envying of those who possess that more, and the wish to appear in the world of more consequence than we really are, which destroy our peace of mind, and eventually lead to ruin.

I never witnessed a man submitting to circumstances with good humor and good sense, so remarkably as in my friend Alexander Willemt. When I first met him, since our school days, it was at the close of the war: he had been a large contractor with government for army clothing and accoutrements, and was said to have realized an immense fortune, although his accounts were not yet settled. Indeed, it was said that they were so vast that it would employ the time of six clerks, for two years, to examine them, previous to the balance sheet being struck. As I observed, he had been at school with me, and,

Rain or sleet, more or less, may be expected about the 7th, 20th, and 28th days of this month, the day before or day after.

When the ladies retired, being alone, we entered into friendly conversation, I expressed my admiration of his daughters, who certainly were very handsome and elegant girls.

"Very true; they are more than passable," replied he. "We have had many offers, but not such as come up to my expectations. Baronets are cheap now-a-days, and Irish lords are nothing; I hope to settle them comfortably. We shall see. Try this claret; you will find it excellent, not a headache in a hogshead of it. How people can drink port, I cannot imagine."

The next morning he proposed that I should rattle round the park with him. I acceded, and we set off in a handsome open carriage, with four greys, ridden by postillions at a rapid pace. As we were whirling along, he observed, "In town we must, of course, drive but a pair, but in the country I never go out without four horses. There is a spring in four horses which is delightful; it makes your spirits elastic, and you feel that the poor animals are not at hard labor. Rather than not drive four, I would prefer to stay at home."

Our ride was very pleasant, and, in such amusements passed away one of the most pleasant weeks that I ever remembered. Willemott was not the least altered—he was as friendly, as sincere, as open hearted, as when a boy at school.

I left him, pleased with his prosperity, and acknowledging that he was well deserving of it, although his ideas had assumed such a scale of magnificence.

I went to India when my leave expired, and was absent about four years. On my return, I enquired after my friend Willemott, and was told that his circumstances and expectations had been greatly altered. From many causes, such as a change in the government, a demand for economy, and the wording of his contracts having been differently rendered from what Willemott had supposed their meaning to be, large items had been struck out of his balance sheet, and, instead of being a millionaire, he was now a gentleman with a handsome property. Belem Castle had been sold, and he now lived at Richmond, as hospitable as ever, and was considered a great addition to the neighborhood. I took the earliest opportunity of going down to see him.

"O, my dear Reynolds, this is really kind of you to come without invitation. Your room is ready, and bed well aired, for it was slept in three nights ago. Come—Mrs. Willemott will be delighted to see you."

I found the girls still unmarried, but they were yet young. The family appeared as contented, and as friendly, as down to dinner at the dinner was

Rain, more or less, may be expected about the 11th, 19th and 27th of this month, the day before or day after.

"Yes," replied he, "she is a very good cook; she unites the solidity of the English with the delicacy of the French fare; and altogether I think it a decided improvement—Jane is quite a treasure" After dinner, he observed, "Of course you know I have sold Belem Castle, and reduced my establishment. Government have not treated me fairly, but I am at the mercy of commissioners, and a body of men will do that which, as individuals, they would be ashamed of. The fact is, the odium is borne by no one in particular, and it is only the sense of shame which keeps us honest, I'm afraid. However, here you see me, with a comfortable fortune, and always happy to see my friends, especially my old school-fellow. Will you take port or claret; the port is very fine, and so is the claret. By the by, do you know—I'll let you into a family secret; Louisa is to be married to a Colonel Wiler—an excellent match. It has made us all happy."

The next day we drove out, not in an open carriage, as before, but in a chariot, and with a pair of horses.

"These are handsome horses," observed I.

"Yes," replied he, "I am fond of good horses, and as I only keep a pair, I have the best. There is a certain degree of pretension in four horses I do not much like: it appears as if you wished to overtop your neighbors."

I spent a few very pleasant days, and then quitted his hospitable roof.

Rain, more or less, with thunder, may be expected about the 3d, 16th, and 25th of this month, the day before or day after.

8 drove up, the servant, the only man-servant, came out, and took the ponies round to the stable, while the maid received my luggage, and one or two paper bags containing extras for the occasion. I was met with the same warmth as usual by Mrs. Willemott. The house was small, but very neat; the remnants of former grandeur appeared here and there, in one or two little articles, favorites of the lady. We sat down at five o'clock to a plain dinner, and were attended by the footman, who had rubbed down the ponies and pulled on his livery.

"A good plain cook is the best thing, after all," observed Willemott. "Your fine cooks won't condescend to roast and boil. Will you take some of this sirloin? the undercut is excellent. My dear, give Mr. Rev. olds some Yorkshire pudding."

When we were left alone after dinner, Willemott told me, very unconcernedly, of his losses.

"It was my own fault," said he; "I wished to make up a little sum for the girls, and risking what they would have had, I left them almost penniless. However, we can always command a bottle of port and a beef-steak, and what more in this world can you have? Will you take port or white? I have no claret to offer you."

We finished our port, but I could perceive no difference in Willemott.

He was just as happy and cheerful as ever. He drove me to town next

He was at Brighton: and having nothing better to do, I put myself in the "Times," and arrived at the Bedford hotel. It was not until after some inquiry, that I could find out his address. At last I obtained it in a respectable but not fashionable part of this overgrown town. Willemott received me just as bef re.

The Lost Wig.—While Lord Coalston lived in a house in the Advocates' Close, Edinburgh, a strange accident one morning befell him. It was at that time the custom for Advocates and Judges to dress themselves in gowns, and wigs, and cravats, at their own houses, and walk to the Parliament House; they usually breakfasted early, and when dressed, were in the habit of leaning over their parlour windows for a few minutes, before St. Giles' bell started the sounding peal of a quarter to nine, enjoying the agreeable morning air, and perhaps discussing the news of the day. It so happened one morning, while Lord Coalston was prepared to enjoy his matutinal treat, two girls who lived in the second flat above, were amusing themselves with a kitten, which, in thoughtless sport, they had swung over the window, by a cord tied round his middle, and hoisted for some time up and down, till the creature was getting rather desperate with its exertions. His Lordship had just popped his head out of the window, directly below that from which the kitten swung, little suspecting, good easy man, what a danger impended, like the sword of Damocles, over

Snow or rain, more or less, may be expected about the 4th, 9th, 16th and 30th days of this month, the day before or day after.

Unwise Men.—The angry man—who sets his own house on fire, in order that he may burn up that of his neighbor.

The envious man—who cannot enjoy life because others do.

The robber—who for the consideration of a few dollars gives the world a right to hang him.

The hypochondriac—who whose highest happiness consists in rendering himself miserable.

The jealous man—who poisons his own banquet, and then eats of it.

The miser—who starves himself to death in order that his heir may feast.

The slanderer—who tells tales for the sake of giving his enemy an opportunity to prove him a liar.

Lines by Lord Byron, found in his Bible.

0 Within this awful volume lies
1 The mystery of mysteries.
2 Oh! happiest they of human race
3 To whom our God has given grace
4 To hear, to read, to fear, to pray,
5 To lift the latch, and force the way;
6 But better had they ne'er been born,
7 Who read to doubt, or read to scorn.

Diligence alone is a fair fortune, and industry a good estate. Idleness doth waste a man as insensibly as industry doth improve him. You may be a younger brother for your own fortune, but industry will make you an heir.

NORAH CLARY'S WISE THOUGHT.

"We may as well give it up, Morris Donovan; lock, 'twould be as easy to twist the top off the great ball of Howth as to make father and mother agree about any one thing. They've been playing the rule of contrary these twenty years, and it's not likely they'll take a turn now."

"It's mighty hard, so it is," replied handsome Morris, "that married people can't draw together. Norah, darlint! that wouldn't be the way with us. Sure, it's one we'd be in heart and soul, and an example of love and—"

"Folly," interrupted the maiden, laughing. "Morris, Morris, we've quarrelled a score o' times already; and to my thinking, a bit of a breeze makes life all the pleasanter. Shall I talk about the merry jig I danced with Phil Kennedy, or repeat what Mark Doolen said of me to Mary Grey!—eh, Morris?"

The long black lashes of Norah Clary's bright brown eyes almost touched her low, but delicately penciled, brows, as she looked archly up at her lover; her lip curled with a half-playful, half-malicious smile; but the glance was soon withdrawn, and the maiden's cheek glowed with a deep and eloquent blush, when the young man passed his arm round her waist, and pushing the clustering curls from her forehead, gazed upon her with a loving but mournful look.

"Leave joking now, Norry; God only knows how I love you," he said in a voice deep and broken by emotion: "I'm y'er equal, as far as money goes, and no young farmer in the country can tell a better stock to his share than mine; yet I, don't pretend to deserve you, for all that; only, I can't help saying that when we love each other, (now, don't go to contradict me, Norry, because ye've as good as owned to it over and over again,) and y'er father agreeable, and all, to think that y'er mother, just out of divilment, should be putting betwixt us, for no reason upon earth, only to spite her husband, is what sets me mad entirely, and shows her to be a good-for"—

"Stop, Mister Morris," exclaimed Norah, laying her hand upon his mouth, so as effectually to prevent a sound escaping; "it's my mother ye're talking of, and it would be ill-blood, as well as ill-bred, to hear a word said against an own parent. Is that the pattern of ye're manners, sir, or did ye ever hear me turn my tongue against one belonging to you?"

"I ax y'er pardon, my own Norah," he replied meekly, as in duty bound; "for the sake o' the lamb we spare the sheep. Why not?—and I'm not going to gainsay but y'er mother"——

'The least said 's the soonest mended!" again interrupted the impatient girl. Good even, Morris, and God bless ye; they'll be after missing me within, and it's little mother thinks where I am."

"Norah, 'bove all the girls at wake or pattern, I've been true to you. We have grown together, and, since ye were the height of a rose-bush, ye have been dearer to me than any thing else on earth. Do, Norah, for the sake of our young hearts' love, do think if there's no way to win y'er mother over. If ye'd take me without her leave, sure it's nothing I'd care for the loss o' thousands, let alone what ye've got. Dearest Norah, think, since you'll do nothing without her consent, do think—for once be serious, and don't laugh."

"I'm not going to laugh, Morris," replied the little maid at last, after a very long pause; "I've got a wise thought in my head for once. His reverence, your uncle, you say, spoke to father—to speak to mother about it? I wonder (and he a priest) that he hadn't more sense.—Sure, mother was the man—but I've got a wise thought. Good night, dear Morris; good night."

The lass sprang lightly over the fence into her own garden, leaving her lover perdu at the other side, without possessing an idea of what her "wise thought" might be. When she entered the kitchen matters were going on as usual—her mother bustling in glorious style, and as cross (her husband muttered) "as a bag of weasels."

"Ye're a pair of lazy hussies!" she exclaimed to two fat, red-armed, stockingless, handmaids; "d'ye think I can keep ye in idleness? Ten cuts to the dozen!—why, that wouldn't keep you in pratees, let alone salt—and such elegant flax, too! Barney Leary, ye dirty ne'er-do-good, can ye find no better employment this blessed night than kicking the turf ashes in the cat's face? Oh! ye'll be mate for the ravens yet, that's one comfort! Jack Clary," addressing herself to her husband, who sat quietly in the chimney corner smoking his doodeen, "it's well ye've got a wife that knows what's what! God help me, I've little good of a husband, harring the name! Are ye sure Black Nell's in the stable?" The sposo nodded. "The cow and the calf—had they fresh straw?" Another nod. "Bad cess to ye, man alive, can't ye use y'er tongue, and answer a civil question!" continued the lady.

"My dear," he replied, "sure, one like you has enough talk for ten."

This very just observation was, like most truths, so disagreeable, that a severe storm would have followed, had not Norah stepped up to her father and whispered in his ear, "I don't think the stable door is fastened." Mrs. Clary caught the sound, and in no gentle terms ordered her husband to attend to the comforts of Black Nell. "I'll go with father myself and see," said Norah. "That's like my own child, always careful," observed the mother, as the father and daughter closed the door.

"Dear father," began Norah, "it isn't altogether about the stable I wanted ye—but—but—the priest said something to ye to day about—Morris Donovan."

"Yes, darling, and about y'erself, my sweet Norry."

"Did ye speak to mother about it?"

"No, darling, she's been so cross all day. Sure, I go through a dale for pace and quietness. If I was like other men, and got drunk, and wasted, it might be in rason—but that's neither here nor there. As to Morris, she was very fond of the boy till she found that I liked him; and then my jewil, she turned like sour milk all in a minute—I'm afraid even the priest 'll get no good of her."

"Father, dear father," said Norah, "suppose ye were to say nothing about it, good or bad, and just pretend to take a sudden dislike to Morris, and let the priest speak to her himself, she'd come round."

"Out of opposition to me, eh?"

"Yes."

"And let her gain the day, then?—that would be cowardly," replied the farmer, drawing himself up: "No, I won't."

"Father dear you dont understand," said the cunning lass: "Sure, ye're for Morris; and when we are—that is, if—I mean—suppose—father, you know what I mean," she continued, and luckily the deepening twilight concealed her blushes,—“if that took place, it's you that would have y'er own way."

"True for ye, Norry, my girl—true for ye; I never thought of that before!" And, pleased with the idea of tricking his wife, the old man fairly capered for joy. "But stay a while—stay, asy, asy!" he recommenced; "how am I to manage? Sure, the priest himself will be here to-morrow morning early; and he's out upon a station now—so there's no speaking with him;—he's no way quick either—we'll be bothered entirely if he comes in on a sudent."

"Leave it to me, dear father—leave it all to me," exclaimed the animated girl; "only pluck up a spirit, and, whenever Morris's name is mentioned, abuse him—but not with all y'er heart, father—only from the teeth out."

When they re-entered, the fresh-boiled potatoes sent a warm curling steam to the very rafters of the lofty kitchen; they were poured out into a large wicker dish, and on the top of the pile rested a plate of coarse white salt; noggins of butter-milk were filled on the dresser; and on a small round table a cloth was spread, and some delf plates awaited the more delicate repast which the farmer's wife was herself preparing.

"What's for supper, inother?" enquired Norah, as she drew her wheel towards her, and employed her fairy foot in whirling it round.

"Plaguy snipeens," she replied, "bits o' bog chickens, that you've always such a fancy for;—Barney Leary kilt them himself."

"So I did," said Barney, grinning: "and that stick wid a hook of Morris Donovan's is the finest thing in the world for knocking 'em down."

"If Morris Donovan's stick touched them they shan't come here," said the farmer, striking the poor little table such a blow with his clenched hand as made not only it, but Mrs. Clary, jump.

"And why so, pray?" asked the dame.

"Because nothing belonging to Morris, let alone Morris himself, shall come into the house," replied Clary; "he's not to my liking, any how, and there's no good in his bothering here after what he won't get."

"Excellent!" thought Norah.

"Lord save us!" ejaculated Mrs. Clary, as she placed the grilled snipes upon the table, "what's come to the man?" Without heeding his resolution, she was proceeding it to distribute the savory "birdeens," when to her astonishment her usually tame husband threw the dish and its contents into the flames; the good woman absolutely stood for a moment aghast. The calm, however, was not of long duration. She soon rallied, and, with blazing face and fiery tongue, thus commenced hostilities: "How dare ye, ye spalpeen, throw away any of God's mate after that fashion, and I to the fore! What do you mane, I say?"

"I mane that nothing touched by Morris Donovan shall come under this roof; and if I catch that girl of mine looking at the same side of the road he walks on, by the powers I'll tear the eyes out of her head, and send her to a nunnery!"

"You will! And dare you to say that to my face, to a child o' mine! You will—will ye?—we'll see, my boy! I'll tell ye what, if I like, Morris Donovan shall come into this house, and, what's more, be master of this house; and that's what you never had the heart to be yet, ye poor ould snail!" So saying Mrs. Clary endeavored to rescue from the fire the hissing remains of the burning snipes. Norah attempted to assist her mother, but Clary, lifting her up somewhat after the fashion of an eagle raising a golden wren with its claw, fairly put her out of the kitchen. This was the signal for fresh hostilities. Mrs. Clary stormed and stamped; and Mr. Clary persisted in abusing, not only Morris, but Morris' uncle, Father Donovan, until at last the farmer's helpmate swore, ay, and roundly too, by cross and saint that before the next sunset, Norah Clary should be Norah Donovan. I wish you could have seen Norry's eye, dancing with joy and exultation as it peeped through the latch-hole;—it sparkled more brightly than the richest diamond in a monarch's crown, for it was filled with hope and love.

I don't know how it is, but the moment that the course of true love runs smooth, it becomes very uninteresting, except to the parties concerned. So it is only now left for me to say that the maiden, after a due and proper time consumed in teasing and tantalizing her intended, (a practice by the way, which I strongly recommend, as the best mode of discovering the temper, &c. of the gentleman,) told him her saucy plan and its result. And the lover hastened upon the wings of love (which I beg my readers clearly to understand are swifter and stronger in Ireland than in any other country) to apprise the priest of the arrangement, well knowing that his reverence loved his nephew and niece that was to be (to say nothing of the wedding supper and the profits arising therefrom) too well not to aid their merry jest.

What bustle, what preparation, what feasting, what dancing, gave the country folk enough to talk about during the happy Christmas holidays, I cannot now describe. The bride, of course, looked lovely; and the bridegroom—but pshaw! bridegrooms are always uninteresting. One fact, however, is worth recording. When Father Donovan concluded the ceremony, before the bridal kiss had passed, Farmer Clary, without any reason that his wife could discover, most indecorously sprang up, seized a shillelah of stout oak, and whirling it rapidly over his head, shouted—"Carry me out! by the powers, she's be't! we've won the day!—Ould Ireland for ever! Success, boys! she's be't—she's be't!"—The priest, too, seemed vastly to enjoy this extemporaneous effusion, and even the bride laughed outright. Whether the good wife discovered the plot or no, I never heard; but of this I am certain, that the joyous Norah never had reason to repent her "Wise Thought."

Modesty.—"There is no charm in the female sex that can supply the place of virtue. Without innocence beauty is unlovely, and quality contemptible; good breeding degenerates into wantonness, and wit into impudence. The best preservation of female honor is female delicacy; modesty is the hand-maid of virtue, appointed to tend, to dress, to serve her; it is, as it were, to adorn and defend them; and when that is laid aside, they are neither beautiful nor safe."

Tincture of Roses.—Take the leaves of the common rose, place them, without pressing them, in a bottle, pour some good spirits of wine upon them, close the bottle, and let it stand until it is required for use. This tincture will keep for years, and yield a perfume little inferior to otto of roses; a few drops of it will suffice to impregnate the atmosphere of a room with a delicious odor.

An Inference —A servant who had lived many years with a clergyman, his master, took occasion to say: "John you have been a long time in my service—I dare say you are now able to preach a sermon." "Oh no, sir, but many an inference I have drawn from yours." "Well," said the clergyman, "what inference would you draw from this text out of Job—And the asses snuffed up the east wind." "Why," replied John, "the only inference I can draw from that is, that it would be a long time before they would grow fat on it."

PRAYER.

Go when the morning shineth,
Go when the moon is bright,
Go when the eve declineth,
Go in the hush of night;
Go with pure mind and feeling,
Fling earthly thoughts away,
And in thy chamber kneeling,
Do thou in secret pray.

Remember all who love thee,
All who are loved by thee;
Pray for those who hate thee,
If any such there be;
Then for thyself in meekness,
A blessing humbly claim,
And link with each petition
Thy great Redeemer's name.

Or, if 'tis e'er denied thee
In solitude to pray,
Should holy thoughts come o'er thee,
When friends are round thy way;
E'en then the silent breathing
Of thy spirit raised above,
Will reach his throne of glory,
Who is Mercy, Truth, and Love.

Oh! not a joy or blessing,
With this can we compare,
The power that he hath given us
To pour our souls in prayer;
When'er thou pin'st in sadness,
Before his footstool fall,
And remember in thy gladness,
His grace who gave thee all.
